This article analyzes the first years of the Institute of Hotel Training created in the administration of President Carlos Ibáñez del Campo (1927-1931). The objective is to understand the importance that was assigned to tourism as an economic activity and new productive sector of the country, together with the need to professionalize the service offer. For this we will use different speeches of the authorities of the period, decrees that shaped the Institute, as well as a systematic reading of the organ of diffusion of the Department of Tourism of the Ministry of Development, titled Bulletin of Information.

KEY WORDS: Tourism, hotel education, hospitality, Chile.